From the Palette

Fall 2021

Leaves changing, nights cooling, days shortening. Autumn is here.

My October began with spotting a cow moose and her calf at Turnbull Wildlife Refuge (just over an hour from my house.) Behind them in the thick brush was a bull moose eager to draw the cow's attention. What a great way to start the month. Barely two weeks later, I saw an even larger bull moose at the Wildlife Refuge. I see a moose painting in my future.

What is it?

No, I have not migrated to abstract painting.

I have disguised this new painting so it will be a surprise at my upcoming Waterfowl Festival Show.

Check out my blog www.besseart.blogspot.com on November 12 to see what it is.
